INTERNATIONAL WORKSHOP

WOMEN IN A PROFESSIONAL CONTEXT:
UNDERLINGS BY DEFAULT?

October 18, 2014
Room 410, FLCE
University of Nantes

WOMEN IN A PROFESSIONAL CONTEXT: UNDERLINGS BY DEFAULT? (AXE 2 DU CRINI)

This international workshop will focus on the different factors, either historical, political, social or cultural since 1945 which may help to explain the current professional situation of women in different European Union countries.

Miriam Glucksmann is Professor of Sociology at the University of Essex. She has longstanding interests in work, employment and gender, especially restructuring, and connections between different forms of labour. Her books include Women on the Line (1982, 2009), Women Assemble: Women Workers and the New Industries in Inter-War Britain (1990), Cottons and Casuals; the gendered organisation of labour in time and space (2000), and the jointly edited A New Sociology of Work? (2005). In 2007 she completed an extensive research programme on 'Transformations of Work' as an ESRC Professorial Fellow, and she is currently completing research on 'Consumption Work and Societal Divisions of Labour' funded by the European Research Council. She is a Fellow of the British Academy and of the Academy of Social Sciences.

Daniel Guinea-Martin is Lecturer in Sociology at the Universidad Nacional de Educación a Distancia (UNED), Madrid. He is Principal Investigator of the project «The effects of the crisis on female employment» funded by the Spanish government. His most recent publications are «The joint effect of ethnicity and gender on occupational segregation» (Social Science Research, 2015) and «Compassionate and egalitarian» (Ethnography, 2014). The British Social Research Association awarded Daniel the 2004 Mark Abrams prize. He read his PhD from the European University Institute, Florence, holds an MSc from the London School of Economics, a postgraduate diploma from the University of California, San Diego and a BA from the Complutense University, Madrid.

Birgit Pfau-Effinger is Professor of Sociology and Research Director at the University of Hamburg, Germany. She is also Professor for Comparative Welfare State Research at the University of Southern Denmark. She has published numerous articles in high-ranking academic reviews and several books with leading English language publishers. The German Research Council has included her in the online list for outstanding female scientists, AdademiaNet, since 2010. An article by her in Work, Employment and Society was chosen in 2012 as "Favorite WES article of the last 25 years" by the British Sociological Association.
